10 Texans Fined $1,311 For
Exceeding Waterfowl Limits

Ten residents of Fort Worth, Texas, last week (July 6) were fined $1,311 in State courts for killing more than the legal limit of wild ducks and geese, according to a Biological Survey report to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. The cases had been under investigation since last December by cooperating United States game management agents and State wardens.

The violators were all Fort Worth citizens. The birds they had taken were packed in barrels and shipped to Fort Worth storage houses. The arrests were made shortly after Federal and State agents traced the shipments by examination of warehouse, telephone, and telegraph records.
